

Dozens of sites around the country contributed to the Manhattan Project. Corporations and universities, as well as the three major research and production sites at Oak Ridge, Los Alamos, and Hanford, provided the necessary laboratories, research, and production facilities.